NEMESIS OF THE PLACEBO.

A famous French physician of the Second Empire is said to have given the following prescription to a hypochondriac patient who worried him: R. Aqua fontis 100
Illa repetta 40
Eadem stillata 12
Hydrogen peroxide 0.32
Nil aliud 125

One drop thrice daily. This elixir, it is said, cured a large number of neuritis about the court and in Parisian society. But it got the doctor into trouble at last through the indiscretion of a pharmacist. A grande dame de par le monde, as Brantome would have called her, who had taken it for years with blind faith and unflinching success and recommended it to her friends as an infallible remedy for most human ailments, in an evil hour allowed herself to give way to the curiosity which proved the ruin of Eve. Consumed with eagerness to know the secret of the composition of the wonderful panacea, she submitted the document containing the mysterious formula to all the initiated whom she came across. At last she found one who revealed the fatal secret. What explanation the physician attempted is not recorded, but there can be little doubt that the outraged lady explained her attitude in language more picturesque than polite. A more modern instance of the nemesis of the placebo occurred not many years ago to a well-known practitioner in this country. He had a patient, a neurotic lady, as exacting as such patients can often be. He had at one time given her some opium pills, to which she became too much attached, and he finally decided to give her no more. On the following Sunday evening while sitting at table after dinner he received an urgent letter either to come at once or to send more of the pills. He sent the servant to the surgery for a pill box, and there and then rolled some pills from the crumbs on the table. He received a grateful letter of thanks stating that the pills had produced the much-desired sleep, and asking for the prescription; this he declined, and was much pleased with himself on the whole. But his gratification was diminished a few mornings later when at 2 a. m. he was roused from sleep to send another supply.—British Medical Journal.

It is reckoned that the United States Government owns enough arid land west of the Rock Mountains, if irrigated, to provide homes for the total present population of the country.

LEPROSY IN SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. Jonathan Hutchinson, whose departure for South Africa to investigate the mode of diffusion of leprosy we announced in The Journal, has returned and made a highly important communication to the Times. Later his researches will probably be communicated at greater length to the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society. In addition to the large leper asylums on Robben Island (Cape Town) and at Emjanyua (Tembuland), he has visited many districts where the disease occurs, in order to investigate the domestic conditions of lepers. His inquiries establish the fact that the disease is very sparingly scattered over the whole of South Africa, and is by no means abundant anywhere. It chiefly affects the colored races, but a certain number of cases are to be found among the Dutch farmers. The first cases (in members of the latter class) were recognized near to Cape Town 150 years ago. Since then it has gradually spread from the Cape Town district over the whole British territory, including the newly annexed colonies of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. In Natal it was a new disease as recently as sixty years ago, and is still met very sparingly. In Zululand it is as yet almost unknown. Mr. Hutchinson concludes the primary cause of the disease is the use of badly cured salt fish. Such fish is prepared at Capetown and various places on the south and west coasts, and is sent inland in large quantities. While believing that this has been by far the chief agent in its diffusion, Mr. Hutchinson thinks that he has obtained conclusive evidence that leprosy may in very exceptional circumstances be communicated from person to person. He does not believe that it is either infectious or contagious in the proper sense of these words, but that it may be communicated by eating food contaminated by a leper's hands. This mode of transference can obviously occur only under the most careless conditions as to taking food and hence the explanation that the disease never spreads in leper asylums or in well-civilized communities, while it does so in Hottentot and Kafir kraals. Its introduction into these kraals is usually effected by some laborer who has been into Cape Colony to work and returning home with the seeds of the disease has become a source of this kind of food contamination in his native place. The measures suggested for the prevention of the disease are first (and by far the most important) the legislative control of the fish-curing establishments; secondly, the diffusion of information as to danger of contamination; and, thirdly, the establishment of small isolation homes into which lepers should be induced to go during the stage involving risk. Thus Mr. Hutchinson, as the result of his investigation, reaffirms the "fish-hypothesis" of the origin of leprosy—a doctrine which he has strenuously and persistently maintained for many years in the face of almost universal opposition of all the other authorities. He has also, against the general view, insisted that leprosy is not in the ordinary sense a contagious disease, pointing out that although a number of lepers live in England and mix freely with the population no case of contagion has ever been observed. This peculiar method of contagion from lepers through food is a new hypothesis, but it in no way invalidates (on the contrary, it confirms) Mr. Hutchinson's view of the non-contagiousness of leprosy in civilized life.—Medical Journal.

RIPOSTE.

A certain man of letters entertained at dinner a number of eminent contemporaries. Several of the courses had been served before it became obvious that Professor Smythe and Professor Browne, who were seated side by side, were apparently oblivious of each other's presence, while assiduously devoting themselves to the viands before them.

Prof. Smythe, being rather a sensitive man, presently became cognizant of the attention he was inviting on himself. Therefore, crushing his envy and adversary, and in a most engaging manner, said:

"Browne, my head rings; can you account for it?"

For a moment Prof. Browne's brows contracted, while courtesy and animosity contended. Then he smiled indulgently, as he replied:

"Naturally. It is hollow."

The silence became oppressive. Finally it was broken by Prof. Smythe who asked:

"And does your head never ring, my friend?"

"Never," came the response.

"Ah," reflectively, "so I thought. It is cracked."

And each philosopher applied himself, diligently, to the course before him.—Hastings-Bailey in May Smart Set.

LADY MINTO, WHO HAS BEEN ENJOYING GOTHAM SOCIETY.
Lady Mary Caroline Minto, wife of the governor general of Canada, recently visited New York, where she was lavishly entertained, although in a quiet manner, by members of Gotham's exclusive circles.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHAFING DISH PARTY

Blessed be the man who invented the chafing dish, says the modern hostess, for few more delightful ways to entertain chosen spirits can be conceived than a delightful little chafing dish supper. Those planning such an affair may find helpful the one given at Mrs. Rorer's Cooking School in the series of functions now being held by the pupils as a practical demonstration and test of their year's work, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Miss Helen Weston of Memphis, Tenn., was the noxious, and very dainty and pretty did the table look around which her guests assembled. A glowing bunch of golden buttercups brightened the table and the same cheerful color appeared in the china. The little ball of yellow butter at each cover was placed on a fresh, crisp lettuce leaf, and at the end where she presided all the needfuls for her work were daintily arranged.

The menu was:
Chicken Canapees.
Sweetbreads with Mushrooms. Rolls.
Chicken in Brown Sauce.
Lettuce Salad. French Dressing.
Wafers. Neufchatel Cheese.
Whipped Cream with Nuts.
Coffee.
Cricket Canapees.
Chop the meat from the back and the tips of the wings of one cooked chicken. Add to it two tablespoons of finely chopped celery, a saltspoonful of salt and a dash of red pepper. Cut bread into round or triangular pieces. Butter and toast quickly. Spread one side with the chicken paste. Garnish with olives. Dish on small heated plate with little paper doyley, and serve.

Sweetbread with Mushrooms.
For this dish is needed one pair of sweetbreads and one-half pound of mushrooms. Wash the mushrooms and cut into thin slices. Put in a closed dish with two tablespoons of butter, a level teaspoonful of salt, and a saltspoon of pepper. Cover and cook for five minutes. Then add the sweetbreads that have been parboiled and picked apart. Moisten two tablespoons of flour with four tablespoons of cold milk. Then add two-thirds of a cup of milk and cream mixed. Stir until smoking hot. Add a teaspoonful of soy and place a clove of garlic in the center of the dish. Cover for two minutes and serve.

Chicken in Brown Sauce.
Boil chicken until very tender, and when cooked cut into blocks. Put two tablespoons of butter in closed dish and two rounding tablespoons of flour; mix. Add one-half pint of good stock, a teaspoonful of onion juice, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a level teaspoonful of salt, and the chicken. When hot add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and serve.

Whipped Cream with Nuts.
Whip one pint of cream to a stiff froth. Stand on ice until perfectly cold. Heap into a pretty glass dish, dust the top with powdered sugar and finely chopped almonds.

SONG.
A little fleet of cloud-boats
Goes sailing down the sky,
In some unfathomed haven
Anchored at peace to lie.

My love of you goes drifting
—Charlotte Becker in May Smart Set.
Adown the days. Ah, me,
Would that thy peaceful harbor
Within your heart might be!

ADVICE TO YOUNG BASE-BALL PLAYERS

BY CONNIE MACK,

Manager of the Philadelphia American League Club.

Protection for Base Sliders.

The necessity of watching the base and not the ball cannot be too strongly impressed on the base runners. There exists no need to turn the head to watch the direction in which the ball will be thrown. By keeping his eye fixed on the base to which he is moving the runner will be able to see the baseman who is to handle the ball. He can thus tell whether the ball will be high or low or right or left of the base. This will give the base runner the opportunity to decide upon the style of slide he will make. The decision must be arrived at promptly and executed unhesitatingly. A change in the runner's intention will result in bad execution of the play.

There is always a certain amount of danger to the player who slides. Bruises, sprains and abrasures will frequently result. Protection from a possibility of these injuries is necessary. The base runner who slides should protect himself by wearing good, heavy pads so that when he is making a desperate slide, which is often necessary, he will not bruise himself when coming in contact with the hard, rough ground. There are many kinds of pads used. The best, and that used by the majority of first-class players, is a towel rolled up and pinned to the pants. With a few exceptions all players slide differently, and the padding can be adjusted to suit the player. It should be placed where it will do the most good.

In former years the suits were made with padding over the hips, knees, and legs, but this is not done now. The players, when sending their measurements to the manager of the club, will invariably insert a memorandum that no padding is wanted in the pants. This enables the player to arrange the padding to suit himself.
